

All She Gets from the Iceman is Ice.

Did you ever elope? If not you should try it once. All the joys and sorrows to be experienced will be portrayed at the Butler this evening when the Allen Curtis Musical Comedy company presents "A Runaway Honeymoon." One of the features of the piece will be the song "All

You Get From the Ice Man Is Ice," as sung by the chorus. And that chorus. Talk about a sweet collection of female fancies. They are it. And did you notice the one on the end with the hair of a brunette shade. Maybe she wasn't cute. Last night's show was as crowded as the opening performance for every seat in the house was taken and the S. R. O. sign was in evidence. The play tonight promises to eclipse the last two performances for the players have now become accustomed to the stage, which is slightly smaller than those to be found in the larger theaters. As it is the show is the best that has ever struck Tonopah.

COPPER MINES AND PROSPECTS OF YERRINGTON

The copper mines and prospects in the vicinity of Yerrington, Nevada, were examined during the season of 1908 by F. L. Ransome, of the United States geological survey, and a report of the work has just been published as an advance chapter from bulletin 380 (380-B), which is to form the survey's contribution to economic geology, 1908, part I.

The town of Yerrington is in Lyon county, in that part of western Nevada which lies between Tahoe and Walker lakes, and the nearest railway station is Wabuska, twelve miles to the north. The town is in the middle of Mason valley, through which Walker river flows northward for some twenty-five miles before turning to the east, near Wabuska, around the north end of the Walker range on its way to Walker lake. Only a small part of the water of the river reaches the lake, however, for most of it is used for irrigating Mason valley, which is under extensive cultivation and yields bountiful crops of alfalfa. Near Yerrington the valley is from three to four miles wide, but it expands northward to a broad plain, in one place fully twelve miles across and irrigable only in part with the present supply of water.

The principal copper mines are west of the town, in the mountain ridge of which the Indian name is said to be Singatse, but which has also been called the Smith valley range. This range has an average width of four miles, and the general line of its crest is from 1600 to 2600 feet above the valley at Yerrington, or from 6000 to 7000 feet above the sea. The mines constitute a chain from two miles in length, lying on the east slope of Singatse ridge, about half way between valley and crest. By wagon road they are four to eight miles from Yerrington. Most of these mines have shipped some oxidized copper ore, and the history of all goes back thirty years or more, but none has produced abundantly or continuously. At present operations are confined to developments in the zone of sulphide ore or, at one mine, in a zone of mixed sulphide and oxidized ore. Another group of copper prospects lies in the low hills four or five miles southeast of Yerrington, but at only one was work in progress at the time of Mr. Ransome's visit. The report which may be obtained by applying to the director of the survey, Washington, D. C., gives a brief account of the general geology of the region and describes the mines and prospects in somewhat greater detail. Concerning the future of the district Mr. Ransome says:

"The total quantity of oxidized ore exposed in the district is small, and there is no indication of any extensive sulphide enrichment. The quantity of gold and silver in the ores is practically negligible. The future of the mines depends on the working of low-grade primary deposits. The conditions are in some respects favorable for cheap mining and concentrating; a railroad could be constructed from Wabuska along Walker river with very little difficulty, water is more plentiful than in some other parts of Nevada, and many agricultural products can be grown in Mason valley. On the other hand, water, tailings, and smelter fumes are subjects concerning which miners and farmers usually find agreement difficult."

A HOT TIME.

PASADENA, April 27.—E. J. Hart of 507 East Orange Grove avenue, with six hives of bees in his wagon, started north on Los Robles avenue, about eight o'clock last night.

Opposite the Hotel Maryland his team took fright at an automobile and dashed up the avenue. At Mountain street the horses made a sharp turn and Hart and the bees were thrown out on the pavement.

Then there was a hot time until Hart was rescued by passers-by.

The horses ran west on Mountain street, and were caught at Lincoln avenue.
